Buckle Up

Everyone, every ride, regardless of seating position

Unbelted occupants become "bullets" in a crash

Whether you're riding in the front or back seat, a seat belt is the simplest way to protect yourself in a crash

SAFE PASSAGE

moving toward zero fatalities

WWW.NJSAFEROADS.COM

MP072014

New Jersey's seat belt law requires all motor vehicle passengers in the front seats and back seats to buckle up. Belt use by the driver and all front seat passengers is a primary offense — a police officer may stop a vehicle and issue a ticket for this violation alone. The back seat belt requirement is a secondary offense — a police officer may only ticket the unbelted adult passenger if the driver of the vehicle has committed some other motor vehicle offense. Failure to comply with New Jersey's seat belt law carries a fine.

Wearing a seat belt, regardless of seating position, increases your chances of surviving a crash by as much as 75%

To learn more about seat belt use and the dangers of riding unrestrained, visit:

www.njbackseatbullets.com

MP032011